FORCED CHARITY.

New York Tribune. "Speaking of duns," said a dry goods drummer the other night, "there is no more persistent dun than your charitable collector who per' sists in presenting the needs of his or her (a fe in season and out of season, with a polite indefatigability that is truly exasperating. The ruder you are with them the more credit do they take to themselves for traveling the straight and thorny path, and the longer you hold out, the more you are expected to give in the end. By far the best way, according to my experience, is to acquiesce the moment the collector opens her mouth, and you surprise her so that you can come off with flying colors under cover of a very

Some men are thrown into a panic by this class of persons, and while they hate to give, ear equally to refuse, especially merchants whose trade depends somewhat on their berconal popularity in the community. I remember nce when in a Western city trying to sell goods to an exceedingly stingy storekeeper, that the man, while talking to me, was suddenly thrown nto a state of nervous fear by the clerk telling him that there was a lady in the front part of the who wanted to see him about a Christmas tree for the orphans' home. Confound the woman,' he said. 'Do you

'No,' said the clerk, 'and I guess she does act know you, for she called me by your name. and when I told her she was mistaken, apologired by saying she had never met you. 'Let me see her,' said the merchant, as he peeped through a scratch in the ground glass partition of his office. 'She's adady,' he mut-tered ruefully, 'who has only lately joined our Oh, hang it, I never was any good at iffing a lady. "Now the old curmudgeon had treated our him, a rival drummer had secured the cream of his trade anyway, and I felt that I could afford to vent a little of my spite on him. So I spoke up with: 'Let me tackle her,' I'm an expert in dealing with these people. When I'm home our house always turns all of them over to me. I work. In Saar and Baden the day will grans, was read some gentleman arose one of them plank down $1 for a fund I pre-and moves that it should be printed with tended to be getting up for a widow with ten tended to be getting up for a widow with tended to be getting up for a wido falling down our own elevator shaft. Just in troduce me to her as Mr M-, the owner of the store, and I'll get her out of here in ten minutes as pleased as if you had grumblingly given 'I don't like to try it, ' said the old fellow hesitatingly. 'I have a good deal of confidence in your ability as a talker, but I don't think you

esn do much in this case.'
'You just try me.' I said, as he walked torealized it the clerk introduced me as Mr. M---, while Mr. M — himself drew away from her as if she was dangerous and fell to counting the nov in the cash drawer kilently 'I come to ask you Mr. M- -,' she began,

He could have got off with $5 if he had relied on imself, at the worst, and here I had played a rick on him that would cost him five times that. Slowly he counted the bills out and bitterly he grudged each one.

'Let me open the door for you, ma'am,' I said, as I led the way to the front entrance, bowed the collector out and stepped out after I knew enough not to remain behind with

You will pardon my saying so, Mr. Mgratefully surprised at your generosity. I am a stranger in this city, and was told that you were a rather difficult person to approach and seldom gave liberally to any cause.

ion and how much it cost him to do it, or not 'That's a pretty good story, " said a listener. 'and it's not often that a collector finds the way paved for her like that. But some of their methods for overcoming the natural selfishness of mankind are worthy of study. I remember when I was running a store of my own in a town of about 15,000 inhabitants an effort was made to nild a hospital. A lot of indefatigable women took hold of the scheme and chose one of their number, more indefatigable than all the rest, to canvass the larger merchants of the town and ee what they would contribute. When she came to me she produced a subcription list on which some fifteen or so of my w merchants had put themselves down for $250 each. Nobody seemed to give less than that, and the collector remarked that Mr. whose name stood at the top, had started the list with that sum, and the others vere evidently doing just as well in their business as he was, and were not going to be beaten by him in a matter of generosity. he worked on my pride in the usual deft way they have, and, though I could not well afford t, I did not want to seem less prosperous than my rivals or less public-spirited. About $10 would have been more my sire, but a single $100 on that unbroken list of $250, would look so ouspicuous that I hesitated, was lost, and made No. 16 to give a quarter thousand.

'The next day I met my cousin Jim, who also was in business for himself there, and as the subject of the proposed hospital came up in conversation, I asked him how much he had sub-

'I gave $100,' he replied. 'I think that's quite enough for a man in my circumstances. I see you gave $250—the same as A-, the millionaire, and some other fellows. Are on making more money than we think, old

'Ice be jiggered,' he replied; 'why did you not put your name down on the other list?" What other list?' I replied in consternation as the truth began to dawn on me. Why the list of small subscribers,' he said. There are two lists to this thing, you see-one for the subscriptions of $250 or more, and one passed, smiling airly. 'Really, I for- Great Anxiety Over the Probable Outcome of the May-Day Move.

> Military Will be Kept in Readiness for Urgent Demands, Though Authorities Anticipate Little Trouble.

[Copyrighted by the Associated Press.] LOOKING TO MAY-DAY CELEBRATIONS.

BERLIN, April 26 .- The emperor has telegraphed instructions to Chancellor Von Caprivi regarding the attitude of authorities throughout the country towards May-day celebrations. In his dispatch his majesty says that the attitude of authorities should be concerted and consistent. The chancellor presided at a meeting of the Prusian privy council last night at which the emperor's suggestions were considered. Reports from populous centers showed that the authorities in some places were preparing to suppress public demonstrations by the use of soldiery. In other places they were contining themselves to issuing warnings against excesses. Chancellor Von Caprivi made arrangements to secure a unity of action between the various authorities. Although it is expected in official circles that the day will pass over quietly. Every precaution will be taken for the prompt suppression of disorder. Troops will be kept with their barracks in order to avoid collision with those taking part in celebrations, but they will be ready to act if required. The emperor will return to Berlin on April 30. It was his intention to hold a grand spring review of the army on May day, but this has been postponed until May 23, with a view not to provoke workmen. Socialist leaders here continue their efforts to influence men against the suspension of work. Herr Bebel Liebknecht and Signor Singer, through the central committee of the party, are actively operating to prevent manifestations. Nothing like an unanimous demonstration throughout Germany is now possible. Large numbers of workingmen are found everywhere who differ with those desiring to make a demonstration. The tendency among workingmen in Berlin is working half a day on May 1. All beer houses and restaurants having space have been engaged for celebrations on the evening of May 1, at which the police, if the socialist law is enforced, will be kept lively. Workingmen's societies at Chamnitz have voted against taking part in the demonstrations. Silesian miners have decided to Leipsig and Frankfort persist in organizing demonstrations. A mass-meeting of Hamburg workmen held to-day considered the proclamation by public companies and leading firms declaring that absentees on May 1 will be dismissed. Those present at the meeting unanimously resented the proclamation, and decided to take holiday, pledging themselves to support any of the men who suffer through the employers' edict. As the police of Hamburg prohibit public meetings, trades have arranged for excursions and rural sports, where free vent will be given regarding the eight-hour work day. Preparations for a strike are being made by carpenters, tinsmiths, locksmiths, printers, mechanics, copper men and a number of minor trades. The reports from Frankfort, Breslau, Elberfeld and Hamburg, show that the strike mania is universal. The government of Saxe Weimer has been obliged to suspend building operations owing to a strike of building trades in the dutchy.

STABBING AT PARIS.

A Blind Broom Maker Stabbed in the Abdomen Little Chance for His Recovery. Special to the Gazette.

PARIS, TEX., April 27 .- A brutal and cowardly stabbing took place in L. H. Clark's saloon at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. A crowd was in the house drinking, and among them was Billy for those of less. I put down my $100 among a Price, a blind broom maker. He ot of $5 and $10 fellows, and it shines out there asked Price Dillard for a drink. Dillard who was considerably the worse for liquor became offended and drew his knife, but bystanders interfered. In a few minutes the blind man started to go out at the back door when he again came in contact with Dillard, who stuck his knife into Price's abdomen. After the cutting Dillard started to run off, but was arrested by Policeman Bill and carried before Justice Rountree, who fixed his bond at $1000, which he failed to give. The wounded man was taken to the hospital. His physicians say there is little chance for him to recover.
